SECOND CZECHOSLOVAK NATIONAL RESISTANCE AND MILITARY MEDICAL SERVICE

Doc. PhDr. František DOHNAL, CSc.
Purkyně Military Medical Academy, Hradec Králové
(Rector: Col. prof. MUDr. J. FUSEK, DrSc.)

The aim of presented materials is following - to contribute at least with a modest share to knowledge of the IIInd Czechoslovak national resistance under conditions of the Military Medical Service, i.e. questions untill recently interpreted insufficiently or unilaterally. The IIInd Czechoslovak national resistance, participation of military medical service personnel and victims belong to light pages of a historical development of the Czechoslovak Military Medical Service and create a dominant of its tradition-uneasy to overlook.

The author considers it necessary to give some elementary notes and explanations to the text: the prominent attention in exploratory work was focused on medical and pharamceutical officers. Used abbreviations identifying battle-field mean a geographic expression of a combat site of Czechoslovak foreign troops or a participation in the national resistance (W = West, ME = Middle East, E = East, NR = National Resistance, SNU = Slovak National Uprising). The multiple use of these abbreviations in particular individuals indicates their changing combat efforts.

A participation of Czechoslovak health personnel during the war in Spain above all the staff of the Komenský Czechoslovak field hospital (abb. S) has been partly observed to make accurate some previous views. Participants of the SNU may be included into a category W, which was done with a mobilization to the 1st Army Corps at the territory being liberated.

Double surnames, or first name mean the mentioned individual used a code name during the war or he made him re-named after the war (most frequently were adopted Slavonic names). Doctors who likely graduated during the war (Great Britain) or after the war a title MUC is not used. According to the great number of doctors in the Czechoslovak Unit in the Great Britain, various of them were enable to serve in the Royal Army Medical Corps (R.A.M.C.). Some Czechoslovak doctors were together with them deployed for instance against Japanese in Indo-China.

Further to proposed materials there is the list of military doctors who were sentenced by the State Court in framed political processes after the year 1948. These most flashy cases include many Military Medical Service officers who were marked with different forms of political and service discrimination. They are to be remind during historical evaluation of the Czechoslovak Military Medical Service. Given materials make no pretention to be thorough enough in documentary way. Further investigation in this option has been limited with contemporary uncomplete separation of military files of former Czechoslovakia. Thus the author would welcome all notices and the readership's initiative to this topic and at the same time he appologies for inaccuracies. More detailed literature and further data to individual persons are at the author's disposal.

Note:

The presented material is the result of research in the files of the Military Historical Record Office in Prague and the Record Office of Military Registration of People in Trnava. It was made more accurate on the basis of talks with those who remember the events - the personnel of the Czechoslovak Military Foreign Units. The author has available the provisional lists of all the personnel of the Military Medical Service in the Czechoslovak Foreign Units (partly even in the national resistance) during World War II. They contain 1015 people.

A considerable representation of the people of Jewish faith even in the Military Medical Service of the Czechoslovak Military Foreign Units was one of the facts of the Second Czechoslovak National Resistance which was concealed for a long time (compare work by E. Kulka). The author can provide their own provisional list containing more than 160 people.
